Security risk forecast: The Global Risk Forecast analyses the probability and potential impact of security threats and vulnerabilities, assessing the likelihood of violent crime, terrorism, and armed conflict.

Political risk forecast: This layer assesses the political stability and institutional capacity of each country, focusing on aspects such as government effectiveness, regulatory restrictiveness, and corruption levels.

Areas of heightened risk include:
- Areas with very high security risk, indicating a high likelihood of violent crime, terrorism, and armed conflict.
- Areas with high political risk, reflecting significant political instability and low institutional capacity.

The map reflects the complexity of global risk factors, emphasizing the interplay between security and political environments. It serves as a tool for businesses and policymakers to make informed decisions, understanding the potential impacts of risks in different regions.
