The biggest development in global terror tactics has been the shift away from bombing to synchronised active assailant/shooter and siege tactics. Whilst prevention sits with law enforcement, intelligence and government, businesses across the world must be prepared for the impact that these inevitable events will have on their supply chains, retail outlets and customers. Reviewing recent events which have occurred in Paris, Brussels, Sydney, London and Barcelona has provided a knowledge base of the range of terrorist activity, the subsequent activity by law enforcement and the difficulties businesses face in recovering. This workshop will address the findings and provide real solutions for businesses.

» About the workshop

Control Risks uses knowledge gained from more than 40 years of resolving incidents and providing advice, analysis and guidance to clients in crisis situations. We have developed a workshop that will give you an in-depth understanding of the complex, and often delicate, issues involved in a terrorism incident.

» Who should attend?

The workshop is designed for managers who will play a key role in responding to a terrorism incident at a local or corporate level. This includes staff involved in:

- Risk management
- Legal services
- Public relations
- Corporate security
- Human resources
- Business development

» What will you learn?

The interactive training will provide participants with insights into the evolution of the threat, using detailed attack profiles, case studies and survivor accounts as the foundation. Participants will learn about the strategy of the terrorist, the mind-sets and behavioural characteristics of the attackers, as well as the varying tactical approaches security forces in different countries are likely to employ in their effort to resolve on-going incidents.

» Mapping threat sources in Western countries

The workshop addresses: how organisations should respond in the critical first hours after an incident occurs, the roles and responsibilities of a crisis management team and the benefits of having a well-rehearsed plan in place. Communication strategies for managing calls with attackers, hostages, and victims in hiding will also be covered. Training will be delivered through a combination of video and audio materials and simulated incident scenarios.

» The workshop will enable you to:

- Understand the current terrorism threat around the world, drawing on Control Risks’ incident database and expert analysis
- Learn crisis and incident management best practice
- Initiate recommended preventative measures
- Manage the potentially conflicting interests of involved participants through family support, government liaison and crisis communication

» Our instructors’ expertise

The instructors, Sean Cunningham OBE and Kevin Curreri, are globally renowned experts in counter terrorism and hostage incident response, with operational and instructional experience in over 60 countries, and detailed first-hand knowledge of law enforcement response strategies to terrorist siege incidents.

» What is included in the price?

Lunch and refreshments will be provided, along with a drinks reception and canapés on the first evening.

Please note that flights and accommodation are not included.

» Contact us

For more information on course content, dates and our prices, please visit https://www.controlrisks.com/training-calendar or contact us at imw.management@controlrisks.com +44 207 970 2109