The bespoke 2-day advanced KFR exercise gives participants an opportunity to flex their incident management acumen and learn about how a KFR incident generally plays out. As part of the exercise, participants will be required to manage a simulated KFR incident.

Instead of a discussion-orientated table-top exercise, scenario developments to this advanced exercise will arrive in the form of slides and discussion points guided by Control Risks, as well as other inputs such as fabricated newspaper, radio and TV messages, and calls and emails from simulated stakeholders. Role players will be used throughout the exercise to underscore the challenge of managing the varied stakeholders, some of whom may work at cross purposes during such an incident. Such an interactive exercise will force participants to consider and perform all the relevant activities in a crisis management situation, including dealing with the pressures of time constraints and scarcity of information. Above all, organisations will have to determine how best to coordinate and execute their collective response.
