

Investing in Africa

supporting your organisation in reassessing investment opportunities and risks

Without a doubt, the COVID-19 pandemic has setback the economic progress achieved across the African continent in recent years, but this should not deter investors.

Africa is still in the midst of the pandemic, with vaccination rollouts progressing slowly and further waves of infections likely. Yet this year's Africa Risk-Reward Index issued by Control Risks and Oxford Economics Africa, paints a picture of a continent recovering, albeit in an uneven and sometimes unpredictable way that raises as many challenges as it does opportunities for those looking to invest or grow their business in Africa.

How can we help you?

For more than 40 years, Control Risks has been helping clients prepare and assess their investment risks and opportunities in Africa. With eight offices across five countries on the continent supported by an experienced team of over 400 staff and consultants and an extensive on-ground network, we can provide the support our clients need. We work with the some of the largest investors and multinationals across the region as well as the most respected African companies, from mining and energy to NGO's, technology and telecommunications.

Some of the ways we help our clients:

Stress-testing your growth strategy for Africa to re-align it with any fundamental changes in the political, regulatory and security environment triggered by COVID-19

Re-assessing your exposure to risk and reward for your operations in post-pandemic Africa

Building scenarios and monitoring key indicators to keep ahead of the curve in terms of risks and opportunities in the market

Identifying economies, sectors and companies, which are likely to emerge stronger from the pandemic or may present opportunities for investment in distressed asset

ESG, cyber and compliance due diligence of current or potential investments

Remote or in-person security, risk and compliance reviews to reconfirm your local risk exposure for projects/ operations which you cannot visit in person
